

Diplodocus

This enormous plant eater belonged to the sauropod family of dinosaurs. It had a small head and a long neck, so that it could feast on plants other dinosaurs couldn't reach. Some paleontologists think these dinosaurs didn't chew, but instead swallowed food whole and let their gut do the work. So that's how they got so big!

